ASSE Issues a Call for Speakers for the E.J. Zimmer Technical Seminar

Presented as part of the ASSE 2010 Annual Meeting

Westlake, Ohio, April 29, 2010 — The American Society of Sanitary Engineering has announced a “Call for Speakers” for the E.J. Zimmer Technical Seminar. The 63rd annual technical seminar is being held on Friday, November 12, 2010 at the Flamingo Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas, Nevada.

Presented as part of ASSE’s Annual Meeting, the E.J. Zimmer Technical Seminar features seven qualified speakers who provide attendees with the most technically relevant information available in industries related to plumbing. The focus of this year’s seminar is “Plumbing in the 21st Century.”

The American Society of Sanitary Engineering is currently seeking knowledgeable speakers who can educate the seminar’s attendees about new and evolving plumbing related technologies, many of which are covered in ASSE’s existing and developing professional qualifications standards.

Proposed presentations should be 30-minutes in duration. Potential topics include: med-gas systems, residential fire sprinkler systems, self contained breathing apparatus replenishment systems, firestop systems, high purity water piping systems, green and sustainable plumbing systems, and any other new or evolving technology involving the plumbing industry.

Chosen speakers will be knowledgeable and have substantial experience in their respected topics of discussion, will be comfortable speaking in front of large audiences, and will be enthusiastic about sharing their knowledge and educating the public.

The deadline for applications is July 16, 2010. Once the “Call for Speakers” is closed and the final selections have been made, the chosen speakers will be notified.

To Apply:

In an e-mail or letter, submit the following information to the ASSE International Office: presentation title, presenter name and job title, company/organization being represented (employer), topic of presentation, objective of presentation, contact information, and a 300-word or less abstract of your presentation.
